A Year Down Yonder

Synopsis of Book
Richard Peck, drawing the setting from his family’s hometown and farmhouse, transports readers back in time to the Great Depression. In his earlier text, A Long Way from Chicago, Mary Alice and her brother Joey travel by train to the south. They spend a week with their feisty Grandma Dowdel each summer over several years. However, it’s now 1937, the family has lost their apartment in Chicago, and Joey joined the Civil Conservation Corps. Mary Alice journeys back to the small town to live with her grandmother for the school year while her parents weather the financial turmoil. Over the ten months that follow, a deep bond forms between the two and Mary Alice discovers that small town life can be quite exciting and entertaining.

Using the Reading Trek in Class
This title has connections to people, places, and environment.
1. Introduce the book to the whole class on an interactive whiteboard using the Reading Trek map, and highlighting Grandma Dowdel’s layer. Mr. Peck did not specifically identify Cerro Gordo in the text, but rather in an interview, as he wanted readers to connect with their own ideas of small towns.

2. Identify and discuss the acts of philanthropy in each of the vignettes in the text. Create a multi-circle Venn Diagram using one for each chapter to record the setting, the act of kindness, the characters involved, the outcome, and personal reflections. Make notes as to how Mary Alice’s opinion of her grandmother changes. Some lesson plan information can be located at Learning to Give.

3. Discuss the difference between an economic depression and recession in terms of job availability, personal income, and family impact.

4. Contact the local American Legion Post to arrange for a guest speaker to discuss projects for the class to help veterans in the area.

5. A Reader's Guide, provided by Penguin Random House Books, offers discussion questions and curriculum connections in math, science, social studies, and art. Teacher Vision also offers Discussion Questions. Quizlet (TeachersFirst review) offers the game, Make Everything Disappear, matching questions and answers.

6. Discuss how inflation has changed the value of certain coins and dollar amounts over time using The Inflation Calculator (TeachersFirst review).

7. During the DAR celebration of Washington’s birthday, the true identities of two guests is revealed. Discuss how Grandma Dowdel manipulated the guest list and atmosphere in her home as a catalyst for this.

Additional Activities

1. Use the Reading Trek for stimulating discussion, asking questions, or for writing prompts about living in a small town during a time of want. Compare student suggestions to how Grandma Dowdel dealt with her situation.

2. Students can listen to A Long Way from Chicago and A Season of Gifts, the first and third in this series of stories are available on YouTube.

3. Students can create their own My Map (TeachersFirst review) depicting their home, school, and several other places that they visit on a regular basis.

4. Students can race to find the words in the virtual Word Search offered by Reading is Fundamental (TeachersFirst review), available in Easy, Medium, and Hard.

5. To check comprehension or just for fun try these Questions and Quizzes from Shmoop (TeachersFirst review).

6. Using The Bement Story as a guide, create a booklet about the local community. Students can research through local historical societies and create advertisements about past and present businesses, short stories about families, school, and community events, while highlighting local heroes using Printing Press (TeachersFirst review).

7. Make Fork Cookies as a class and discuss how available each item was in a Depression era kitchen. Combine ½ cup Butter, ¼ cup Granulated Sugar, and 1 cup Self-Rising Flour. Shape into 1 inch balls. Place dough balls on a baking sheet lined with parchment paper. Dip a fork in water and press the tines across each dough ball one time, dipping the fork in the water each time. Bake 15 minutes at 350°. (Note dairy and gluten allergies.)
